

Good to Outstanding (G2O) professional development programme

An Ealing Learning Partnership blended professional development and mentoring programme for primary school headteachers and senior leaders

This innovative programme has been developed for Ealing schools through a partnership between Dr Julia Coop (Athene Education), Outstanding Schools in Ealing and the Ealing Learning Partnership. It is intended for primary headteachers, deputy headteachers and other SLT members who can evidence good educational provision in their schools but are keen to take extra steps towards securing an outstanding Ofsted judgement.

The programme has been refined and updated in the light of recent shifts in the educational landscape and feedback from previous cohorts.

Details about the programme

The programme comprises four practical sessions based in two outstanding Ealing Schools. The final session is followed by a day of bespoke consultancy based in each participating school. The purpose is to explore the practical application of skills and knowledge to help develop and embed outstanding practice in the school's context.

Sessions include:

- Realising Outstanding leadership for success: Lessons from research
- Moving to Outstanding: Sharpening self-evaluation skills and the school improvement planning.
- Developing a positive change culture
- From theory to practice: Recognising outstanding provision, including teaching, learning and assessment

To consolidate the above delegates will be expected to complete a range of practical pre and post training tasks in collaboration with partner schools.

Delivered by Dr Julia Coop Athene Education

Julia is a highly-acclaimed school improvement consultant, trainer and key note speaker. Until 2015 she was Director of Educational Development and Inspections at Tribal Education, responsible for the development of school improvement training and CPD programmes for school leaders, teachers and inspectors. As a successful and highly regarded early years practitioner, headteacher in primary and special education and a school lead inspector Julia has worked closely with Ofsted. She was awarded her doctorate in 2005 for her work on inclusion and school improvement.

Julia provides school reviews and bespoke consultancy and has developed a suite of training courses that enhance and develop a school's internal capacity to improve and fully reflect the recent changes within UK Education.

Julia delivers school improvement and effectiveness consultancy and training throughout Singapore, SE Asia and the Middle East. She works as a critical friend to schools, particularly those struggling to improve. Julia is a Trustee of Young Epilepsy and St Piers Residential Special School and College.

By the end of the course, participants will be expected to:

- Use rigorous monitoring and self-evaluation skills in order to successfully build capacity and drive continuous improvement;
- Reflect on strengths and areas to develop in their own professional practice;
- Undertake a personal, professional skills analysis linked to school improvement priorities;
- Identify the skills needed to build a strong team;
- Ensure school improvement activity is focused on securing high-quality provision and outcomes;
- Be confident in the use of key improvement planning tools;
- Possess up to date knowledge of the National Curriculum, current arrangements for assessment and the Common Inspection Framework;

It was a great opportunity to view, evaluate and discuss teaching and learning in another school.

The programme gave us an overview of some really useful strategies to support moving teaching from good to outstanding.

We were able to see what outstanding teaching looks like through lesson observations.
