The Production

IMPACT Theatre invites you to journey through an underwater experience that will highlight the dangers the Oceans of the World face from plastic pollution.

Inspired by the sculptures of Jason de Cares Taylor, artists and performers from IMPACT worked hard, before, during and after lockdown to create artwork, music, dance and poetry for the purpose of telling this important environmental story.

In addition they researched other Immersive projects in Paris and York and as a consequence this film came together.

Last but not least there will be an accompanying exhibition with artwork, pottery and photography influenced by the project.

Impact Theatre

IMPACT is a registered charity dedicated to promoting a positive image of disability, developing communication and building self-confidence, through participation in performing and creative arts.

IMPACT Theatre runs workshops and short performances in the community, benefiting both the members of the company and a wide range of audiences. These include disability arts, arts events and many more activities.

The charity was set up in 1999 and then became the Charitable Incorporated Organisation IMPACT Theatre in 2014. IMPACT Theatre is a pioneer in ensuring our organisation is user-led.

It is different from many organisations, in that it really does encourage members to take part in the many aspects of the successful running of the company and facilitates, relying on as much input from members as possible.

In Support of RED ROPE

BAFTA winning Production Designer, Eve Stewart is proud to support Impact Theatre and the Red Rope production.

Following this week's release of the latest Marvel production, The Eternals, she has turned her attention to raising awareness of another film that's about saving our planet.

Red Rope makes an important statement about a real-world earth-destroying villain: plastic.*
